Additional informationDefinitions

Dyed diesel fuel has red dye added to identify it as not having federal or state fuel taxes included in the cost. Other names commonly used for dyed diesel are: marked fuel, farm fuel, “red dyed” diesel.

Using dyed diesel

This license allows approved government agencies and organizations to use dyed diesel or biodiesel when operating licensed motor vehicles on public roadways. Some examples of approved users are:

Public school districts

- Nonprofit educational organizations
- Government agencies

Unlawful use

It is unlawful to use dyed diesel in vehicles that drive on Washington State public roadways or highways unless you have a Dyed Diesel User license. Examples of unlawful use include:

- Using a licensed vehicle with dyed diesel and you don't have the Dyed Diesel User license.
- Fueling a licensed vehicle with dyed diesel from your bulk storage tank (both the vehicle and the tank are subject to penalties) and you aren't licensed properly.
- Operating farm vehicles, registered with “Q” decal, with dyed diesel beyond the allowed radius.
- Using a farm licensed vehicle registered in Canada and filled with “marked fuel” on United States highways.

Penalties for unlawful use of dyed diesel

Each violation will result in a fine of $10 a gallon or $1,000, whichever is greater. For example,

- If you have three licensed vehicles, each with a 20-gallon capacity, you may be fined $3,000.
- If you use a 150-gallon dyed diesel slip tank or bulk storage tank that you use to fuel a highway licensed vehicle, you may be fined $1,500 for the bulk storage tank and $1,000 for the fuel in the vehicle tank.

Cancellation and revocation

- Current Dyed Diesel User licensees may cancel their license at any time by marking a current tax return in the “cancel license” section, pay any taxes owed, and adding the effective date.
- A revocation of a Dyed Diesel User license will occur for failing to file a quarterly tax return or for not paying your fuel taxes. We will send you a “Notice of Intent to Revoke” letter and you will have 20 days from the date of the letter to submit your return and any applicable payment. When you are in a “revoked” status, you cannot operate your vehicle with dyed diesel.
- To reissue your revoked or cancelled license, you will need to complete the following:
- submit a new Dyed Diesel User License Application
- submit all tax returns due
- pay any unpaid taxes for each license
- include $100 reinstatement fee for all revoked licenses

Record keeping

You must keep your dyed diesel records for five years from the date the tax return was due or filed, whichever is later.

Investigation and enforcement is conducted by the Fuel Tax Evasion Unit

This is a partnership between the Department of Licensing and the Washington State Patrol (WSP). This unit investigates fuel tax evasion, and takes phone calls from a tip line 1-800-497-FUEL (3835).

WSP enforcement

WSP will conduct “dips” to check fuel tanks for dyed fuel and determine if the operator is using the fuel illegally. If a violation occurs, the operator will receive a fine, which may appear on their record as a felony or misdemeanor.
